

Social Workers Advancing through Grounded Education (SAGE): Building Capacity for Mental and Behavioral Health in Indian Country

The SAGE project will recruit, train, and financially support Native and non-Native students as they complete their concentration practica.

SAGE students are awarded paid practicums and will complete 360 hours of their field education either in American Indian Country or with American Indian populations, providing students with the necessary experience to transition into employment in Indian Country.

SAGE REQUIREMENTS:

- Specialize in Mental and Behavioral Health;
- Have a desire to work with American Indian and Alaska Native populations;
- Participate in American Indian/Alaska Native events;
- Participate in Center for Violence & Injury Prevention Events;
- Focus on working with at risk children, adolescents, and transitional age youth.

To request an application or for additional information, contact Molly Tovar, Director of the Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies and Professor of Practice at 314-935-7767 or mtovar@wustl.edu

Download an application at buder.wustl.edu/SAGEproject

* The project's acronym, SAGE, is meaningful for AI/AN populations in mental and behavioral health. The sage plant is used by original peoples to signal the creator one's need for help or guidance and to strengthen a person before an important undertaking.

